MR. MILLER'S MARTYRDOM.

Further Proceedings Before the Insurance Committee.

mather inquired into yesterday by the Sub-Comman. At eleven o'clock, half an hour after the time set for the opening of the defence, Mr. Tobey was the only member of the committee present. A commotion was created by apparations in the shape of small boys, who entered at eleven, with a little tess than a ten of New York Times files, containing tharges and innuendos against Miller. These files were preduced in obedience to a summons issued to orge Jones and his chief editor, Mr. Jennings, who had been instrumental, Miller claims, in causing the investigation. The boys and the files were followed by Mr. Jones in person, who had natically awaited the pleasure of the absent committeemen. John M. Stewart, of the Mutual Life, was recalled, ed verified the stub-check and the check put in as widence on his regular examination, and which re-aced to $2,500 paid by them for examination of the sempany. Mr. Miller simitted that he had received

The article of September 4, 1871, was read from the Times, under the caption of the "Strikers in a lew Field?' it speaks of the companies narassed by the strikers of the Legislature and she efforts of ther to increase his emoluments.

I have no persons knowledge of the information pon which it was fased; I know we sent out to get iformation, and the facts appeared in the article; I coline answering lay question relating to the mode of doing our business in the Times office; I do not presently know any one who can sustain the allo-

Another extract about an interior company's examination was read, but witness could not tell who would sustain the charges made in this extract against Miller, witness never conversed with the agents of foreigh companies about Miller's reaminations; have not seen Mr. Miller's response to the charges as published in the Herath.

Mr. Barnes hype objected, on the ground that the New York Timis was not on trial, and insisted that is was irregular to call all the editors in the city, and especially shose here recording the proceedings and in some cases misrepronting them as well. Mr. Miller responded, characterizing Barnes' objections as a pyrotechnic display worthy of a prosecutor such as he who wished to dictate to him how he should conduct his defence. The action of Barnes, he declared, was to prevent the very man who made the charges in his paper, and who, if anybody can, is capable of giving reliable statements, from destifying as to what he knows. The prosecution had taken the evidence of editors inimical to him, and now endeavors to choke off the defence.

The Chair decided that Mr. Miller was right, and

The Chair decided that Mr. Milier was right, and the examination was resumed.

Mr. Jones—i know of no foreign insurance company whose officers can substantiate the charge about your connection with the foreign companies; don't know that you were abroad at all. (Here an article published October 14, 1871, headed "Raising the Wind," and charging that Milier blackmailed the insurance companies for the expenses of the insurance companies for the expenses of the insurance companies for the expenses of the insurance contention, was produced.) I do not know where the information was obtained, and if I do I should not divulge the name; I cannot give you the name of any one who will prove the charges contained in the article; don't recollect that our paper in the May previous supported the Couvention and the work accomplished; I know that we seek to commend all honest and legitimate acts of officials.

Q. Do you not, as a general rule, require which The Chair decided that Mr. Miller was right, and

Q. Do you not, as a general rule, require rehable information before attacking private character? A. I decline to answer, as I consider it an insulting

Q. Have you not promised in the paper to furnish evidence to sustain charges against me / A. If we have, produce it; there are the files for you; it will then be time to put the question.

Mr. Miller read from the Times of October, in which they promised to make good these statements, and asked:—

Q. In what why do you propose to prove the charges? A. I am not that paper; I will answer for what I can personally; I don't propose to furnish witnesses at all.

Q. Did Mr. Estreat, write the article on men in the Q. Did Mr. Barnes write the article on me in this morning's Times? A. I decline to answer who wrote it.

Mr. Miller read an article from the Times compilmenting him for closing up the Farmers and Mechanics' Insurance Company, and asked:—

Q. Have you any recollection of it? A. I cannot recollect a long.

Q. Have you any recollection of it? A. I cannot recollect so long.

Mr. Miller read many other extracts from the files and questioned Mr. Jones on the subject, but was mable to trip him up or obtain any satisfactory answers.

Q. Does the article of January 9, 1871, approve the course taken by me in winding up the Great Western Like? A. It appears to do so.

Q. Is Stephen English on your staff? A. I don't propose to tell who are on our staff?

Q. Has not Stephene English conversed with you upen the subject with a view of influencing you? A. I don't know Stephen English, and never had a word of conversation with him on this subject or upon any other, and he is not an editor of the Times, Q. Was Barnes the author of the article of December 28, 1871, extelling him? A. I decline to answer.

Q. Did be procure its insertion? A. I decline to answer.
Q. When the article appeared was you aware that the Attorney General had ruled that the fees referred to in it was the property of the Superintendent? A. I did not know it.

I did not know it. Q. Do you know John H. Reynolds, of Albany?

A. I do.

Q. You know him as a distinguished lawyer?

A. I do.

Q. Had be given an opinion that I was entitled to the one-fifth of one per cent on transfers would you have published it? A. I don't know what I would have done.

Mr. Miller put in Reynold's opinion, dated 18th January, 1872, in which he holds that the fifth of one per cent properly belongs to the Superintendent.

Q. Can you explain the Times' term, "Tammany democraty"

Mr. Barnes—I object to making a dictionary of Mr. Jones.

Q. If you let you had misrepresented a man what would you do? A. It we were certain that we had done injustice to any man we would take it back.
Mr. Miller—I am glad to hear it; I thought you were a man like that; I am sorry you haven't watched the evidence better.
Mr. Jones—I have not seen anything to make me retract what we have said regarding Mr. Miller.
Q. Did you send a man to Rochester to hunt up evidence of my private character? A. I don'tknow;

Q. Do you know I am the Miller? A. I do not of my own knowledge, Mr. Miller—I am sorry to say I will have to give you an opportunity very soon to show it.
Q. Do you remember the letter in the Times signed insurance President? A. My impression is that we have had a good many iciters so signed. Q. When you published the articles approving Bannes' administration and denouncing mine were you aware that the Insurance Times had published an article, which I will read, taking the opposite ground? A. I never saw the paper.
Q. Did English ever call your attention to the fact that he had written the article? A. Don't remember ever having passed a word with English in my life.
Q. Have you not stated that certain insurance

Q. Have you not stated that certain insurance men had presented my wife with $24,000 worth of jewelry? A. I did not; I never spoke of your wife seceiving presents.

Q. Do you not know that Mr. or Mrs. Barnes have gone around to jewelry stores to find out where the seweiry was made? A. No: I never did hear anything of the kind.

Q. Did Jau and Mrs. Barnes not send your reporter around to find out something about B? A. I did not; there is not a word of truth in the story of my connection with it.

Louis J. Jenninas sworn—I am one of the editors of the Times; have been such nearly three years; I was not commenced with it previously except by occasional writings; I was actively engaged on the paper in the winter of 1870 and 1871; we had no special maxiance editor then nor have we one now; the articles on insurance mostly pass under my supervision; the article entitled "The Strikers in a New Fried," in which Miller's trip to Europe at the excesse of the foreign companies is mentioned was read to him. In answer to a question he said the subject had been inquired into and persons were allowed to write. I shall not be compelled to divulge the names of our logoratic I know the Yes.

Q. Several in which Olcott, who had been the author of letters regarding Collector Marphy, was mixed up? A. Mr. Barnes has never consulted me at all about these articles.

cles: Mr. Barnes has never consulted me at all about these articles.

Q. Had not some of these articles been brought from the house of Mr. Thurlow Weed? A. Nane of them came from that source; there was no person as a go-between in connection with Mr. Barnes and us. Witness was questioned about an article referring to Miller's rake of $40,000 as percentage on the transfer of securities, and answered that his information came from the autior of the article.

Q. Did you not send a man to Rochester to inquire about my antecedents? A. No, sir; he was sent up on other business, and sent the list of judgments against one Miller down for publication.

Q. Don't you think your course in denouncing me as a Tammany democrat is unjust? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know any witness or witness to be who will come before the committee and sustain your charges? A. It is not my business to hunt up witnesses for you; my business is to publish news; I think we have redeemed our pledge to prove our charges.

Q. You think so? A. Yes: and we will give you.

Mr. Miller (disconcerted)—Do so, by all means.
Look at this article from the Times. Is it commendatory of the Superintendent? A. I don't know that datory of the Superintendent? A. I don't know that it is; suppose you read it.

Mr. Miller read it. When Miller had read a part of it, witness remarked, "Probably that will do for your purpose; it is not a very pieasing article." (Laughter.) Mr. Miller abaneoned the reading and read another extract from the Times, endorsing his administration for acts that it now denounced him for.

Q. Were you aware of the publication of these articles when those attacking me were inserted?
A. I suppose I was.
Q. Has it been charged by insurance officers that I appointed a great many Tammany receivers? A. It has so been charged in letters from insurance officers.

It has so been charged in letters from institution officers.

Q. You decline to give the name of any one who has given you information? A. It hely won't come forward, as they should, and divuige their names, I do not intend to do it; you have never asked us to publish anything in explanation of the charges, or we would have been very happy to have done so. To Mr. Tobey—I think the testimonial to Mr. Millier was published in the Times at the request of Mr. Miller's litends.

Q. By Mr. Nutter—Did Stephen English furnish any of the articles? A. I believe Mr. English only contributed one article.

any of the articles. A. I believe Mr. English only contributed one article.

This concluded the examination of Mr. Jennings, when consumed all the atternoon, and the committee adjourned until half-past ten this morning.

During the examination of Messrs. Jones and Jennings the room was densely crowded by insurance officials, who listened with great attention, expecting that they would divulge their sources of information.

PROBABLE HOMICIDE IN JERSEY.

A ball was held by a military company of colored men known as the Wilson Guard, at St. John's Hall, Jersey City, on Tuesday night. There was a very large attendance of the brethren and sisters of the colored persuasion, including a delegation from the Veteran Guard of New York. One of the latter, street, was accompanied by a dusky Angelina, who, it appears, attracted the attenlina, who, it appears, attracted the attention of others than her companion. Zeno Garvin, a resident of Jeraey City, let fall some expressions, about five o'clock yesterday morning, regarding the young woman, which, whether true or laise, were calculated to fire the African blood. Cooley called Garvin to account, and a fierce tussle followed. Garvin fired a revolver at Cooley, the charge lodging in the latter's neck. This charge was the signal for a general fusilade, which proved that many men in the hall came provided with revolvers. Officers Eaton and Sterling happened to arrive at this juncture, and no sooner did they undertake to arrest the offenders than they were set upon by a furious crowd, the women scratching them like panthers. Fortunately for the officers, Eaton managed to extricate nimself, and he ran to them like panthers. Fortunately for the officers, Eaton managed to extricate himself, and he ran to the Central police station, whom is situated only 200 yards distant. A squad of police, led by Sergeant Lee, rushed to the scene and arrived in time to ward off a bayonet thrust aimed at Sterling, who was about to succumb to the fury of the yelling crowd around him. Garvin and a fellow named Harrison, who was found brandishing a revolver, were arrested, and in the meantime Cooley had escaped to New York. Almost exhausted from loss of blood he called on Captain Patty, of the Flith precinct, who had him removed to the Park Hospital. All efforts to extract the builet were unsuccessful, and the injured man is in a very serious condition.

PERILS OF THE DEEP.

FREEZING TO DEATH IN MID OCEAN.

Harrowing Sufferings by a Shipwrecked Crew A Collision Off Cape May and Dastardly Flight of the Uninjured Vessel-Perishing from Hunger and Cold-Timely and Gallant Rescue by the Steamship Albemarle.

The recent heavy gales will doubtless cause many The recent heavy gales will doubtless cause many serious disasters along the coast, and the public may be prepared for tales of suffering, owing to the piercing coid which prevails. It is some consolation, however, to think that the ocean is still traversed by some noble seamen, who, when chance or Providential intervention throws a rescue in their way, no risk or pain or hardship will deter them from at least attempting to save their suffering from at least attempting to save their suffering brethren, whom ill luck or accident may have left to perish in the storm. And yet there are others, happily a small minority, who, destitute of all feeling and wrapped up in their own selfishness, care little what becomes of the drowning mariner, and would scarcely go a point out of their course to respond to the cries for help and succor. A case in point is furnished by the sad catastropne which befell the schooner Harry Conrad. The sufferings of her shipwrecked crew are described as harrowing in the extreme, and had it not been for the HUMANE, PROMPT AND MANLY ACTION of Captain G. M. Walker, commander of the steam-ship Albemarle, or the Old Dominion line, they must have been lost. It appears that the Albemarle left have been lost. It appears that the Albemaric left Norfolk on Monday evening, at four P. M. Four hours later it commenced to blow a gale from the northwest, and continued in violence until the following evening. About one P. M. on Tuesday Captain Walker, when off Cape May, sighted a three-masted schooner, sunk, bearing north by west. Without hesitation the captain at once ran down towards the schooner, and, to his surprise, found a small boat made fast to one of the masts containing without hesitation the captain at once ran down towards the schooner, and, to his surprise, found a small boat made fast to one of the masts containing six men and one woman, all of whom were stark and stiff, while the little boat itself was constantly shipping water and tossing about at the mercy of the waves. Not in the course of his long and varied experience has Captain Walker beheld such a heartrending spectacle. The occupants of the boat, who were almost doubled up, were rapidly shining into A STATE OF UNCONSCIOUSNESS.

and it was evident that if not already gone to their last home their hours were numbered. As the Albermarie drew nearer it was perceived that every person in the boat had a coating of ice on over half a loot thick, and, already benumbed and frostbitten, they were for a time deaf to all interrogatories. At length Captain Walker came up quite close to the sunken schooner, and, with stentorian voice, hailed them to cut adrift. As if aroused from deep alumber, and many of them were already dozing prior to dissolution, a gleam of hope brightend for a moment the prospects of the dying crew and a simultaneous effort was made to obey the kind command. But their powers were gone, and in the cfort to relieve themselves they fell back in the boat in a senseless condition. One man, however, who sat in the bow, roused to a last desperate attempt to save his life, seized an axe with his frosibiten hands, and, by one vigorous stroke, cut the rope that so long had enchained them to death. Thus freed, the little boat, with its perishing occupants, dropped alongside the Albemarie, and they were taken through the port on the lee side. They presented a most HELPLESS AND FORLORN STECTACLE, and it was thought that very few of them would survive the terrible ordeal through which they had passed. But the usual remedies, including stimulations and the rubbing of ice on the hands and feet of the sufferer, were quickly applied, and with the great and unremitting attention bestowed upon them by Captain walker to the ticut, where they reside. Captain Walker states that the sanken schooner lies north by west eight miles off Cape May, in seven and a half fatnoms of water, right in the track of vessels going up and down the coast.

ART MATTERS.

Exhibition of the Goupil Collection at Leavitt's

The consignment of pictures sent to this country by the retiring firm of Goupil & Co. were placed on public view last night. Those who had formed high expectations as the class of works composing it were doomed to disappointment. From whatever point we look at them there is little to please or interest, the tevel of merit being rather below than above mediocrity. Nor is works displaying high technical power or grasp of thought. Four paintings, representing the seasons, by Dubufe, lend the weight of an important name to the collection, but, beyond the name, there is little in the paintings to claim our respectful attention. On the contrary, we have just another proof who prostitute their nigh powers at the bidding of dealers, for sake of a little gain, forgetting the noble aims which are the true foundation of all resi art. We are pained to think that the man who painted we are pained to think that the man who painted the "Prodigai Son," which, with its many faults, is a really great work, could descend to the trade production of which the four paintings in this gailery are melancholy examples. In these columns we have steadily advocated the universality of art and the necessity for welcoming whatever is good or noble in the production of foreign schools, but we can see no reason to encourage the importation of such works as chiefly make up the Gouph collection. It is much better to encourage than the fact of their foreign parentage, with now and then a name which in effect is a cheat and a fraud, because piaced as the guarantee of an excellence which does not belong to the painting got up for the American market. The present collection is in truth a clearing out saie of odds and ends, and no doubt owes much of its uninteresting character to this circumstance. It is not likely to awaken much enthusiasm in the breasts of the more intelligent are partons, but will have strong recommendation to the general public in affording people of moderate means an opportunity of securing examples of the European schools at moderate rates. The plictures will remain on exhibition for some days, and will be disposed of without reserve by public auction.

Under the title of Fine Arts a new journal, wholly devoted to the culture of the æsthetic tastes of our long felt the want of just such a vehicle for the conveyance of artistic ideas to the wealthier classes upon whom such a journal must naturally depend for support. The projectors of Fine Arts have alm to teach, and the articles on various sub-jects connected with art are pleasing and instrucjects connected with art are pleasing and instructive. They are written in an easy and popular manner which will meet the wants of the general public better than any profound disquisitions. Among the articles those entitled "The Origin and Division of Art" and "Vicious Cartooning" deserve special mention. The last in particular deals with an important subject in a common sense and dignified manner, justly visiting with severe condemnation the vulgarity and immorality which in many of our illustrated papers take the place of saturcal humor. Laura keene and Emma Webb Nivert nave undertaken the editorial control of the new journal, and under their directions we are certain it will preserve its nigh character and achieve success. The present number contains two large wood engravings and one beamiful photographic illustration. The letter press is printed in clear, elegant type, on thick, snostantial paper. Altogether Fine Arts has been brought out in most creditable style, and deserves the warm support of every one interested in the development of the love and understanding of art among our people.

The new piece, "Black Friday," to be produced at Midio's Garden shortly, and of which T. Macdonough is reported to be the author, is founded upon the incidents in the life of the late James Fisk. A well known author, and of more experience than Mr. Macdonough, has contributed much to the compilation of this piece. It will be an entirely local piece. The title of the "extraordinary Parisian sensation" which is underlined at Daty's theatre is "Article 47," a very strange and fascinating play of the romantic-dramatic-comedy order. It has been acted continuously at the Ambigu Comique, in Paris, since November 16, 1871. Mr. Roberts has been three months preparing the scenes for its production in New York.

been three months preparing the scenes for its production in New York.

Miss Fanny Davenport, the charming comedienne of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, nas returned from a flying visit which she made to New Orleans. While there she played Fanny Ten Evek in "Divorce" for two weeks, and created (so the New Orleans Times says) "the first genuine sensation of the present dramatic season?" At the last Saturday matinee over two hundred ladies were unable to gain admission. Miss Davenport will resume her original part in "Divorce" on the 200th performance.

The Bigim Brothers accept the challenge of the Paris crew of St. John, N. B., conditional on the race taking place on the Harlem River in June or July for $1,000 or $2,000 a side. Now, as the Paris crew stated explicitly in their challenge that the race must take place at Halifax, the acceptance of the Biglin Brothers will amount to nothing.

Mike McCoole, the St. Louis pugilist, and Tom Alien recently had some hard words, which resulted in McCoole offering to fight Allen for $1,000 a side, near Kansas City. The amount did not suit Allen at the time, as the latter wanted to stake $2,500. at the time, as the latter wanted to stake $2,500. Since then it seems Allen has changed his mind, for he has sent a despaten to one of his friends and backers in New York, stating that he is ready to fight McCoole for $1,000 a side, in two months, fifty miles from St. Louis. If McCoole won't light Allen is ready to fight any man in the world for from $2,500 to $5,000 a side. Allen lutrher says that if Mace is not able to get on a match with O'Baidwin he will offst the latter within fifty miles of St. Louis for as much money as he (O'Baidwin) can raise. It is evident that O'Baidwin don't want to fight Mace, and there may be a chance of Allen and O'Baidwin coming together, or Allen and Mace. Allen means oustless, and no doubt he wants to get on a match with some one.—Ptilsburg Daily Dispatch, March 5.

A BOGUS RESURRECTION.

A decidedly grave subject has been made the medium of a somewhat startling loke, by which a goodly portion of the community in Tarrytown, Westchester county, were led to believe that a corpse had resumed vitality when about being lowered into the grave. To magnify the hoax, some enterprising tion story at the disposal of the Associated Press, and, as a consequence, the highly improbable cir-cumstance was scattered broadcast by the newspa-pers yesterday.

It appears that a homeless wanderer, named John pers yesterday.

It appears that a homeless wanderer, named John Engiewood, was found dead at a place called Hail's Corners, on Tuesday morning, and alter an inquest had been held the remains were taken charge of by Poormaster Alfred Lawrence for interment. When the latter had deposited the body of Englewood in the receiving vauit of sleepy Hollow Cemetery, and while returning home with his wagon, he encountered a half-irozen vagrant named Patrick Glenn, recently discharged from the county jail, and who was without food or shelter. This subject Lawrence took into his wagon, with the intention of seeing that his immediate wants were supplied on their arrival at Tarrytown. Some of the neighbors, on asking the Poormaster where had found such a cadaverous individual, received the jocular reply that "he had kicked himself out of the coffin." At once perceiving the joke, Glenn assisted in carrying it out, surprising the gaping crowds who flocked around to concemplate one whom they thought had arisen from the grave.
